Former C.I.D. Chief

Allen Dulles Talks Tuesday at U.S.C.

A capacity audience is expected at the University of South Carolina Tuesday night to hear Allen W. Dulles speak on "Intelligence and United States Responsibility."

The former director of the Central Intelligence Agency will be final lecturer in the Department of International Studies series on "Crisis Areas in United States Foreign Policy."

He is scheduled to speak at 8 p.m. in Drayton Hall and the lecture is open to the public without admission charge.

Mr. Dulles was scheduled to make the commencement address at USC last June but was forced to cancel the appearance because of illness.

His brother, the late Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, was a commencement speaker several years ago at the University.

Allen Dulles was appointed director of CIA in February, 1953, and served until November 29, 1961.

In all he served in CIA more than 10 years, including about 18 months as assistant director before his appointment as director.

He earned the bachelor and master of arts degrees at Princeton, and a law degree at George Washington University.

He holds honorary doctorates from Brown, Temple, Columbia, and Princeton universities, and Boston College.

He is a native of Watertown, N. Y.

In 1948 he was designated by President Truman as chairman of a three-man group to survey the Nation's intelligence system.
